Statement from Codiac Regional RCMP, Nov. 16, 2026

Good morning David,

Thank you for contacting us,

The RCMP encourages members of the public to report any suspected criminal activity, including incidents believed to be motivated by hate or targeting identifiable groups.

Each report is assessed on its own merits, and investigations are conducted based on the available evidence and applicable legislation.
In regard to posters or other printed materials displayed in public spaces, the legality of removing them may depend on a number of factors, including where they are posted and who owns the property on which they are displayed.

Individuals who have concerns about such materials may wish to contact the property owner or the municipality responsible for the location. If the content appears to contain threats, advocate violence, or may otherwise constitute a criminal offence, it should be reported to police.
The RCMP does not encourage members of the public to place themselves in potentially confrontational situations. If residents encounter material they find concerning, they can document it and report it to police or the appropriate property owner for assessment.

As a general rule, we do not confirm whether a police investigation is underway or whether a particular individuals, groups, or organization is the subject of a police investigation, unless doing so is necessary for operational reasons or charges have been laid before the courts.

The RCMP takes all reports of hate-motivated incidents and crimes targeting individuals or communities very seriously. Our priority is to ensure that everyone feels safe and respected, and we will continue to respond decisively to any form of hate-motivated behaviour.

Hate has no place in our communities. We ask that anyone with information that could assist our investigation contact police.

Thank you,
